Kansas City Life Policies

What insurers are thinking and saying the country over constitutes a higher endorsement of our policies than anything we might say about them. The COMPLETE PROTECTION they afford the insured, his family, estate, business interests, creditors and associates as the case might be, against death and total disability are comments you hear whenever our policies are mentioned. The premiums are low considering the benefits received. The cash surrender, paid up and extended values are liberal and available to insured without delay.

They are free from conditions as to residence, occupation, time or place of death. Issued on the old line plan with the FULL RESERVE deposited in trust with the STATE as an absolute GUARANTEE of safety. They are the NATIONAL BANK NOTES OF INSURANCE. They are issued on the ORDINARY LIFE, LIMITED PAYMENT, ENDOWMENT, MONTHLY INCOME AND TERM PLANS. Our Corporation and Partnership Insurance meet all the requirements and should be carried by all such firms. ARRANGE A DATE AND LET US SUGGEST THE POLICY THAT WILL BEST MEET YOUR NEEDS.

COUNTRY CLUB WAREHOUSE AND COMFORT STATION SOME OF WEEK'S BUILDING

THE sale of the Booker apartments at West San Antonio and Chihuahua streets for $100,000 during the present week indicates activity in real estate that cannot be affected by the alleged disturbed conditions along the border.

Property on San Jacinto and South Oregon streets and in Sunset Heights, valued at $47,000, together with $53,000 cash were involved in the exchange. The apartments, owned by L. E. Booker, were sold to Fenchler brothers.

Bids have been opened for the four-story fire-proof warehouse to be built for Krakauer, Zork & Moye on El Paso street, between San Francisco and Main streets. This warehouse with the addition of one story to the retail store facing on San Francisco street will cost about $50,000.

The directors of the Mt. Franklin Country club have authorized the beginning of the work of building the club house, three miles north of the El Paso Country club. The improvement will cost about $20,000.

Modern Gas Lighting

MODERN incandescent gas lamps suitable for residence lighting are made in both upright and inverted types, and in sizes ranging from 40 to 120 candle-power. These lamps are suitable for use upon any type of fixture or bracket required to obtain any desired effect in illumination or decoration.

Incandescent gas lamps are usually lighted by means of continuously burning pilot-flames, consuming a few cents worth of gas per month each.

Means are provided for turning the light on or off by means of a pull-chain or a key at the lamp or by a push-button located at any desired point. In neither case are matches required.

The choice between upright and inverted lamps is largely a matter of personal taste. The new types of small upright lamps, with which decorative or plain glassware can be used, are particularly well adapted for residence lighting, as they may be used instead of open gas flames without changing the fixture arms. Inverted mantles are more durable than upright mantles, and when used with the proper shades, distribute most of the light downward.

Semi-Indirect Lighting

A "semi-indirect" fixture, containing one 80 candle-power inverted lamp. By this arrangement about half of the illumination in the room is obtained by light reflected from the ceiling. The semi-indirect system is coming into vogue very extensively for residence lighting. It provides a soft, mellow illumination, reducing glare from bright light sources and glazed papers, such as are used in most magazines and periodicals. When properly designed, so that the brightness of the bowl is sufficiently reduced, the semi-indirect possesses every advantage of the indirect system, besides avoiding the most prominent fault of the latter—the absence of an apparent source of light. For lighting of this character, the ceiling should be light in color, and plain.

Because of the quality and abundance of illumination which may be secured at slight expense with Modern Gas Light, it is particularly well adapted for semi-indirect or indirect lighting purposes, if indirect lighting be desired.
